LOOK OUT FOR CONGRESS

Henry Clews of New York, in his special letter of October 19, says in part:

The stock market has exhibited exceptional resisting qualities. As in evidence the outbreak in the Balkans forced heavy European liquidation as the result of overspeculation in some of the foreign bourses. This induced large foreign selling of American stocks, estimated at between 300,000 to 500,000 shares, for the evident reason that these were the best securities on which to realize.

As to the immediate future of the market, not a little depends upon political developments between now and election day. What is of as almost as much importance as who will be elected, will be the Congressional recid-ing. The great question is, will the prevailing political unrest in certain sections result in materially changing the pre-scent character of Congress? The country has had more than enough un-savouring attacks upon capital and corporations which are not the only evidence in the country and have in the last few years received more than their share of criticism and prosecution. For this reason the Congress-sional returns should be closely watched after election day as an indication of political tendencies during the next two years. What the country may reasonably hope for is a more temperate and rational treatment of our political ills; a consummation devoutly desired.

Monetary conditions continue an important factor in the stock market.
The West appears to have made more preparations for the present crop movement, the inability of the railroads to handle the grain crops having reduced the demands for money to smaller proportions than expected. It is somewhat unfortunate that gold imports should have been arrested by the foreign situation. We have been obliged to take back $25,000,000 to $30, 000,000 securities in place of gold. In all probability, however, the influx of precious metal is only temporarily delayed. Now that the financial crisis in Europe is about over there will be less difficulty in our purchasing of gold. Our foreign trade balance is running largely in our favor. Moreover, Europe will probably buy back a portion of the stock recently sold, now that the Balkan outbreak is likely to be restricted by the great Powers, and also for the reason that American securities are in a stronger position and offer better returns than any other available in the foreign markets.

American prosperity is based upon a rock. We have the finest harvest on record. No class in the country today is enjoying such general prosperity as the farmers. In nearly all sections of the country and for nearly every agricultural product large yields and high prices prevail. To such an extent is this true that a great deal of jealousy toward the farmer is already developing, and he is becoming more and more accused of being the chief cause for the present high cost of living.

Just at this time securities should be bought with caution, the present hardly being opportune for renewing the upward movement. When political conditions at home become more settled and favorable; when the chances of friction between the great Powers of Europe become more remote, and when our money market settles down to a more satisfactory basis, then we may look for a more active and higher stock market.

A feature of some encouragement is the improvement in the bond market.
There is no lack of capital in the country awaiting safe investment, and the country is facing a period of exceptional prosperity, provided Congress does not interfere by hasty, ill-considered and injurious legislation or deadlocks on important and necessary measures.

A woman riding in a train at Alameda, California was shot in the neck by a stray bullet. The injury was slight.

Railroad system of Canada has bought
